

The recognition of obesity as a disease is a in the established by the World Health Organization WHO making the International Classification of Diseases and related health conditions highlight the global health problem associated with obesity and the medical profession and

The American Medical Association AMA formally recognized obesity as a disease in 1997. In 2013 the AMA declared alcoholism an illness and in 2014 the AMA and the medical profession formally recognized obesity as

The Obesity Medicine Association defines obesity as a chronic relapsing multifactorial neurobehavioral disease that is an increase in body mass index associated with dysfunction and abnormal fat metabolism leading to adverse metabolic, biomechanical and psychosocial health consequences

The American Society of Addiction Medicine is a professional medical organization that defines addiction as a chronic, relapsing brain disease that is caused by genetic, environmental and individual factors. People with addiction are able to engage in behavior that becomes compulsive and functionally debilitating harmful consequences concerning the health care industry and the economic and social aspects of health care.

The World Health Organization is a specialized agency of the United Nations that is concerned with international public health. It is the leading authority on global health issues and is responsible for coordinating and providing technical assistance to countries in the development of their health systems. It also monitors and reports on global health trends and issues.

Public and private health care systems are based on the economic and social aspects of health care. The health care system is a complex of various services and products that are provided to the population. The health care system is a complex of various services and products that are provided to the population. The health care system is a complex of various services and products that are provided to the population.

Goals

1. Bring attention to the need for economic and social aspects of health care.
2. Educate the public and medical professionals regarding the economic and social aspects of health care.
- 3.